

HOSTFLOW

First 10 Nights

A new cohost's pricing worksheet

hostflow.me · cohosting done right · © 2026

A pricing worksheet for the first ten bookings you manage

This worksheet is the same one I use with new cohosts in the first 30 days of their practice. Print it. Fill in the numbers. If the math does not work on paper, it will not work in the calendar.

Step 1: Anchor on time, not on percentage

Before you quote a percentage, estimate how many hours per month you will spend per property. Most new cohosts work 18-25 hours per property per month. Multi-property operators with good SOPs work 8-12 hours per property.

- Hours I expect to spend per property per month: _____
- My target hourly rate: $_____
- Multiplied target income per property per month: $_____

Step 2: Translate hours into a percentage

For a given monthly revenue target, the percentage you need is:

```
target_income / expected_monthly_revenue = percentage
```

Expected monthly revenue depends on what you know about the property. Use the listing audit (the 15-point audit in the Cohosting Startup Kit, Module 05). Do not estimate. Pull the trailing 6 months of bookings from the listing if you can.

- Property monthly revenue: $_____
- My needed percentage: _____%

Step 3: Sanity-check against your market

Open three comparable listings within 5 miles. Same bedroom count, similar amenities. Note their cohost fee (some show it in the listing FAQ, others you have to ask).

- Comp 1 cohost fee: _____%
- Comp 2 cohost fee: _____%
- Comp 3 cohost fee: _____%

If your number is below this range, you are underselling yourself. If your number is above this range and you are new, drop to the median for your first 3-5 clients and renegotiate upward after proving yourself.

Step 4: Decide on the offer structure

Three viable models. Pick one for the first ten bookings, do not mix:

- 20-25% of booking subtotal — the default
- $X flat per booking — predictable for the owner, util risk for you
- Hybrid: 15% revenue + $150-300 monthly base

For your first 10 bookings, percentage is the safest starting point. It aligns you with the owner and lets you learn the property before committing to a flat-fee model.

Step 5: Add the conversation guardrails

Three numbers you must decide before the first discovery call:

- Minimum engagement: _____ months (6 is standard)
 - Late-payment fee: 1.5% / month after NET-15
 - Expense pass-through: cleaning $_____, supplies at cost
-

What this worksheet does not cover

This worksheet handles the pricing decision only. The full operating reference — contracts, listing audit, dynamic pricing, guest screening, owner outreach — is in the Cohosting Startup Kit. Find it at hostflow.me/products.

© Hostflow 2026. This worksheet is for personal use. You may share it with anyone considering cohosting. You may not resell it as a standalone product.